Acknowledgments

This book is the culmination of years of hard work during which time I have received the unflagging support of family, friends, colleagues, and many institutions. The staff of several archives, particularly the Western Historical Manuscripts Collections in both Columbia and Rolla as well as the Special Collections and Archives at Missouri State University, were extremely helpful in my pursuit of voluminous records, which all seemed to need to be recalled from remote-storage locations.

Certain colleagues read and commented on sections of the manuscript and provided invaluable comments. Susan Flader did yeoman's work in her willingness to see the early stages of the manuscript through its roughest days. Truman State University Press has also proved a wonderful partner in this process. Barbara Smith-Mandell saw promise in the manuscript and helped in its transformation into the book it is today.

A special thank you goes out to those closest to me who supported me through the years and ultimately made it possible for me to devote the time and energy to this endeavor.
